Modern, Advanced Healthcare

The U.S. Virgin Islands is committed to providing its residents with the modern, advanced healthcare they need. Served by two main full-service hospitals and a wide variety of clinics, specialty healthcare centers, and non-profit organizations; the USVI offers an array of options for accessible, reliable healthcare. The two major hospitals in the U.S. Virgin Islands are:

- The Governor Juan F. Luis Medical Center on St. Croix, which includes the Virgin Islands Cardiac Center (VICC)—the premier cardiac facility in the Caribbean.
- The Schneider Regional Medical Center, which has facilities on St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John, and is home to the The Charlotte Kimelman Cancer Institute, a state-of-the-art, comprehensive cancer care facility serving the Eastern Caribbean region.

Other major healthcare facilities include the Red Hook Family Practice, The East End Family Health Center, and Frederiksted Healthcare Inc., a private non-profit organization offering cost-efficient, high quality health care services to the people of St. Croix.

Visit the U.S. Virgin Islands Department of Health for a full list of healthcare facilities.
